

DIED IN PENURY, YET HAD $40,000.

Surprising Discovery After the Death of an Aged Priest.

WHY DID HE HOARD IT?

Father Albinger Was Well Known and Respected in All Westchester.

HIS AGED SISTERS WILL BE RICH.

Yet They Didn't Know Where the Treasure Was Kept or
What It Amounted To.

All Westchester County knew Father Albinger, rector of the Church of Our Lady of Victory, Mount Vernon, and believed him poor. He was looked upon as one who loathed money. The discovery after his death that he was storing up gold during all those years of self-denial is a complete surprise to his friends.

There was never a more indefatigable church worker than Father Albinger. His ministrations to the poor made him beloved, not alone in his own parish, but much further afield, also. Asceticism lured in the young, and he had his lean face. His threadbare coat bore testimony to his indifference to personal comforts. His neighbors did not fail to observe how small was the supply of food that went into the priest's house, and it was a mystery to his flock how he kept the breath in his body.

Father Albinger's parishioners sometimes wondered what he did with his salary. They felt sure that he either gave it to the poor or sent it home to his only relatives, two aged sisters, who lived in Frankfort-on-the-Main. It was certain that frequently when he visited neighboring towns, such as Pelham and New Rochelle, he would be discovered in a starving condition, dependent for sustenance on the good will of strangers.

In such esteem was the aged priest held for his benevolence and self-abnegation that last March his parishioners raised a fund for the purpose of sending him to his boyhood's home for a vacation. But it was a short vacation, for soon after his arrival at Frankfort-on-the-Main he died.

The two aged sisters knew more about their brother's habits than any of his parishioners. They knew that he had a hoard of gold somewhere, but were at a loss where to find it. They supposed that he had surely not crossed the ocean without his beloved hoard, but diligent search failed to disclose any trace of it in Germany. Father Albinger, they wrote to the German Consul in New York, asking his help. He communicated with Frank M. Carpenter, treasurer of Westchester County, and Mr. Carpenter instituted a thorough search in and about the old parsonage in Bridge Street. Even the cellar was dug up, but without result.

It was through the priest's old housekeeper that the gold was discovered. In cleaning up the rectory, after receding the bones of her master's death, she had found in an old secretary a bank deposit slip and a key. By this means was unraveled a clue which led last Friday to a safe deposit vault in New York, and the key fitted the lock. Shoved away in the vault were twenty-five boxes of gold, valued at $40,000. Each of them contained 1,000 German marks. Wrapped up in a piece of brown paper were securities having a face value of $10,000. There, with other odds and ends of property, and a substantial bank account, brought the priest's wealth up to a total of $40,000. It will be divided between his two sisters.

SUICIDE WAS ANNA SULLIVAN.

The Staten Island Mystery Cleared Up and the Body Identified.

PIN BELONGED TO BROTHER

Saw Picture of It in the Journal and Recognized It as His Property.

GIRL WAS MENTALLY DERANGED.

Had Wandered Back to Her Old
Richmond County Home
and Then Killed Herself.

The identity of the woman whose body was found in the Cunard Woods, near Hillside avenue, Staten Island, has at last been established. She was Miss Anna V. Sullivan, twenty-four years of age, and lived with her brother, Matthew C. Sullivan, at No. 307 West Twenty-second street, in this city. She disappeared from her home on September 9, and just before 7 o'clock last evening the clothing at Martin & Hughes's undertaking rooms, at Clifton, was identified as that of the missing young woman.

When the body of the woman was interred in the pauper's burying ground Friday afternoon the authorities were of the opinion that her identity would never be known. It was simply regarded as another of the many unsolved Staten Island mysteries.

None of the many persons who had viewed the body or examined the clothing had been able to recognize the woman, and even the little pin of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers failed to lead to the identification.

Early last evening two men and a woman entered the Coroner's office. They were well dressed and the woman was weeping bitterly. One of the men informed Coroner Trauter that they believed that they might be able to identify the clothing of the woman whose body was found last week.

Coroner Trauter brought the clothing into the office, and in a moment the young woman threw herself upon the silk skirt as it lay upon the floor, clasping it in her arms and crying: "It's Anna's! It's Anna's! poor Anna!" Then, with a sob of anguish, she fainted.

After she had been restored to consciousness the identification was made even more complete. The shoes she identified as a pair of her own, while the skirt was one that she herself had made. The younger of the two men then told Coroner Trauter that he had no doubt that the woman was his sister, Anna V. Sullivan, who had disappeared from his home on the Friday before the body was found. He had read in the Journal of the association pin and recognized it as his property. But he brought his other sister, Mary F. Sullivan, to Staten Island to make the identification sure.

He said that for some time past his sister had been suffering from nervous disorders that at times had affected her mind. Of late she had seemed so much better that she was permitted to leave the home which she had been confined to.

On September 9 she went out, saying that she intended to purchase a pair of shoes. At that time she wore a pair that had just been bought by her sister. When she did not return they feared that she had committed suicide. She had left with her and it is believed that she spent the money in purchasing the revolver with which she ended her life, as she had never owned such a weapon.

Seven years ago the family lived at No. 38 Sherman avenue, New Brighton, Staten Island.

The body will be removed and buried in Mt. Olivet Cemetery, on Long Island.
